F of all Firs

the key influence to the new form of street art is directly connected to technology. Technology has made it possible for any person whether they are pissed off at someone/thing, are burning to get their message out, or want to do art...whatever it maybe technology has made it cheaper, faster, sneaker, and easier. Let's take your average home printer, if someone wants to print stickers all they have to do is either rack or buy a shit load of sticker paper. Insert the paper into printer and simply print out whatever message they want. If you do not want anyone to know about it, just make sure you have plenty of printing ink at your disposal. The same with flyers, they too can be done using the printer. Now a days stickers, flyers, stencils, they all can be cheaply and efficiently crafted at home and just slapped up into any environment chosen.

TODAY,

there are a lot of people doing things on the streets who are artists but with a new set of tools, mediums, different ideologies and socializations. You are right, what is going on now no longer fits the same criteria as let's say five years ago, a new term is needed. I look at it more like each person has their own campaign, it seems currently people are getting up in a style which can be termed, "slap propaganda art", meaning stickers, stencils, flyers, most of the art that is created at home and is just applied or slapped onto the streets. I say campaign, because an individual (s) will use a medium for three months and either fall off or switch mediums. That is why I am calling it a "campaign." Each campaign has an agenda/ motivation and can always be evolving. A motivation could be to cover the city to be recognized, or an artist who uses the medium - covers the city street so the gallery doors unlock for them, or having something to say and wanting others to be exposed. Individual campaign Branding... Like I mentioned earlier with the introduction of readily available sticker paper, you can get your stickers custom made by use your printer and in 10 minutes

Graffiti art show shut

A controversial exhibition by graffiti artist Banksy has been closed for "legal reasons", according to his website. The show was shut after painted animals, which became hot and distressed, were taken back to their farm, a spokeswoman said. Organisers did not want to go on without the main attractions - cows, sheep and pigs that attracted animal rights protestors - but there were actually no legal problems, she said. Banksy is now considering taking the show on a national tour, the spokeswoman added. The exhibition, called Turf War, was held in a disused garage in east London.

Religious images

It stayed open for one day after the animals were taken away - but it was decided to keep the doors shut on Monday, the final day. Turf War also included a painting of the baby Jesus with a bomb strapped to his chest and Banksy's version of Rodin's sculpture The Thinker. Banksy, from Bristol, real name Robin Banks, has been hailed as "Britain's most celebrated graffiti artist" and designed Blur's latest album cover. Turf War included pigs painted in police colours, sheep painted in concentration camp stripes and a cow covered in images of Andy Warhol's face. The animals were removed because the "severe heat and heavy petting" were "causing distress to the animals", a statement said. Their removal had nothing to do with protests by animal welfare campaigners, organisers said. The beasts were all show animals from Cheddar, Somerset, used to being on public view, and the paint was animal-friendly, a spokeswoman said. An inspector from the RSPCA approved the animals' conditions, the spokeswoman said. And Hackney Borough Council said they were not happy about the show going ahead - but could do nothing to stop it.

Celebrity party

A demonstrator, Debbie Young, chained herself to railings surrounding a cow, in protest at what she saw as animal cruelty. Stars including Jamie Oliver, Sarah

Cox and Jarvis

Cocker turned up to the show's opening party on Thursday. Banksy has turned down four requests to do ads for Nike and his work is usually seen only on walls in cities across the world.

He has previously painted the Queen as a chimpanzee during her Golden Jubilee and sprayed "Mind the crap" on the steps of the Tate Britain before the Turner Prize ceremony.

e do not believe in ourselves until someone reveals that deep inside us is valuable, worth listening to, worthy of our trust, sacred to our touch. Once we believe in ourselves we can risk curiosity, wonder, spontaneous delight or any experience that reveals the human spirit.

We Are Savage

Kill for the thrill die for the system?

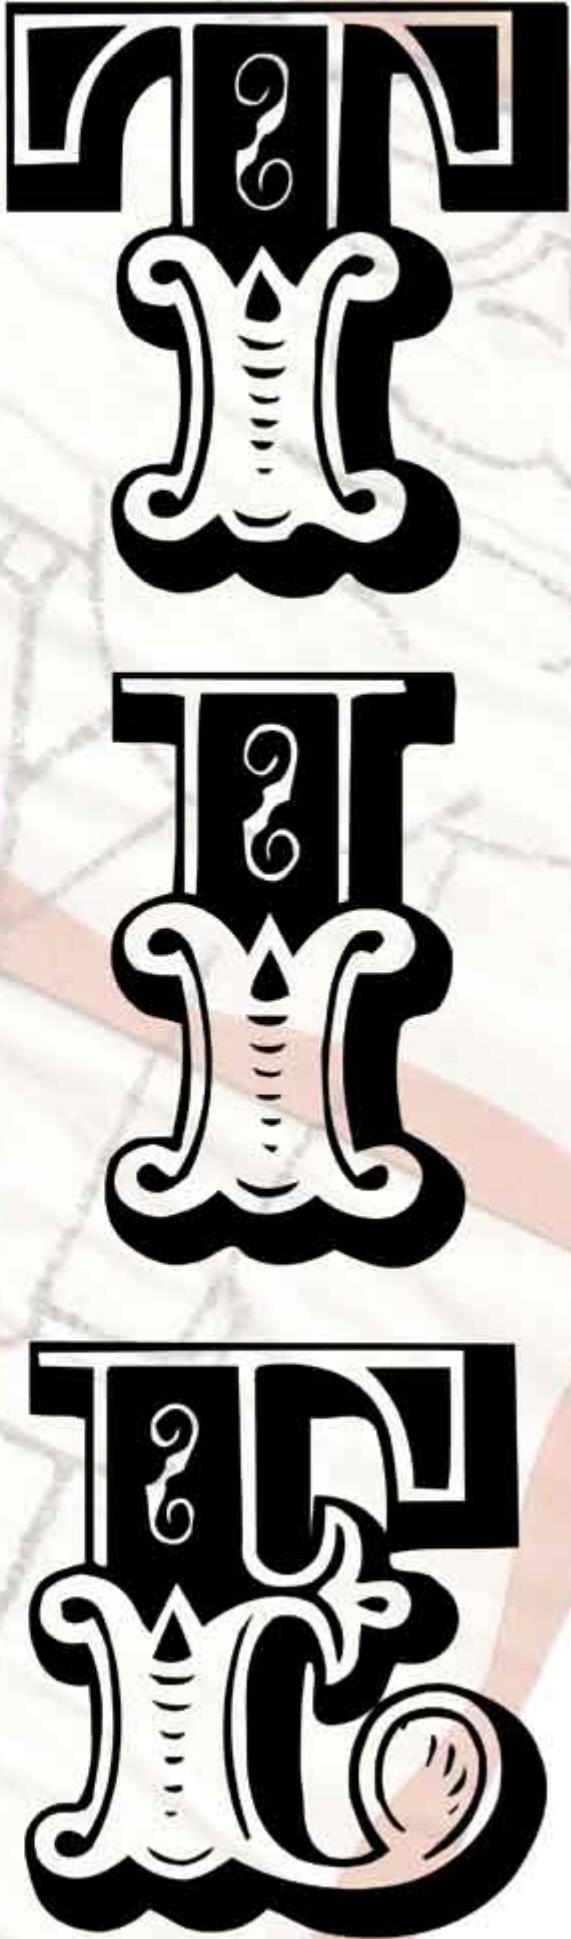

It was pretty big," she said. "It's such a senseless thing." Jackson said her building was repainted just before the vandalism. "We haven't really had any problems before this," she said. Jackson said that while repairing the damage was relatively inexpensive, her husband went to a lot of trouble to cover it up. "When we called to report it to the police, one of them said, 'You know, that's right - we can't dance,'" Jackson laughed. ***** Police Chief John M***** is baffled by the phrase but said he has noticed more graffiti around town. "I have no idea what that means," he said. "It might have been from a movie or something." M**** said in addition to the "cops can't dance" message, anti-war statements and pop culture symbols are showing up, but they do not appear to be gang-related. "We don't really see so much organized gang graffiti in *****," M**** said. This graffiti message is painted on a building on kelafox Street in downtown *****.

However, the city's top cop said this kind of vandalism is no laughing matter. Anyone caught defacing property would be arrested for criminal mischief and could be charged with a felony, depending on the amount of damage. Catching perpetrators can be tricky, though. "It doesn't take too long to do it, and we have to be there to see it. So sometimes it can be hard," M**** said. Hard, but not impossible, he said. Two people were arrested a couple

The best thing a property owner can do is paint over the graffiti, M**** said, to deter other would-be "artists" from adding their work. Wanda H, executive director of the Downtown Improvement Board, said her organization works with property owners to remove the graffiti as soon as possible. "It comes in cycles," she said. "It's one of those things you have to deal with."
